The Gender Politics of Domestic Violence

Feminists Engaging the State in Central and Eastern Europe

Andrea Krizsán, Central European University and Conny Roggeband, University of Amsterdam

Contributions: Raluca Maria Popa, Central European University

Series: Gender and Comparative Politics

'... a substantial contribution to the literatures on human rights, on violence against women, on gender and politics, and on transitions to democracy.' - Sidney Tarrow, author of Power in Movement (2011)

'One need not be a scholar of CEE politics to benefit from Krizsán and Roggeband's searching analysis of why and how such superficially similar states moved in different directions and how feminist efforts to influence policy in any human rights regime can be ignored, coopted or even sometimes effective.' - Myra Marx Ferree, Alice H. Cook Professor of Sociology, University of Wisconsin-Madison

In The Gender Politics of Domestic Violence Policy, Andrea Krizsán, and Conny Roggeband consider what explains the emergence of women's rights friendly domestic violence policy reforms in some countries in the Central and Eastern European (CEE) region and their absence in others. They do so by tracing policy developments in five countries - Bulgaria, Croatia, Hungary, Poland and Romania - across almost fifteen years of change, from the beginning of 2000s, when domestic violence first emerged on their policy agendas, until 2012.
