

HOW WE DO IT

SERVICES / SPP students take advantage of services including the professional development course “Job Search Basics and Beyond”; individual career consultations and group workshops; and opportunities to learn from professionals (including alumni) working within specific fields and organizations.

INFORMATION SHARING / SPP students receive information about job and internship opportunities in the policy realm via the SPP Career Services Newsletter. SPP students also have access to CEU’s career services platform, career>next, and participate in the university’s annual career fair.

EXTERNAL PARTNERSHIPS / SPP Career Services cultivates SPP’s network of potential employers and internship hosts, articulating the benefits of the SPP degrees and the strengths SPP graduates bring with them to the world of policy practice and engagement.

ANDRIJA VISIC

ONE-YEAR MAPP, 2015

"Experienced professionals helped me enormously when I was a student. Their guidance was key to keeping my motivation high. This is why I am always willing to transfer working knowledge by sharing my experiences with current students."

DRAGANA MARINKOVIC

MPA, 2015

"I worked closely with SPP Career Services both as a student and after graduation. The support I received included personalized input on my resume, assistance connecting with professionals in my chosen field—international development—for advice and insights, and tailored interview preparation. The field of international development has grown increasingly competitive in recent years, and my job search took a lot of energy and persistence. SPP Career Services staff was always available with insights, encouragement, and professional feedback."

OUR ALUMNI

Name a field connected with public policy, and you will find an SPP alum.

SPP alumni work in international development, human rights advocacy and protection, risk analysis, and change management. They serve as gender advisors, partnership managers, monitoring and evaluation specialists, and national development strategy advisors.

Some of our alumni are active in non-profit organizations. Others drive social enterprises. Still others promote social and economic justice, head national electoral commissions, or provide strategic advice to regional and national officials. A smaller percentage pursue further academic study.

SPP alumni live and work in 66 countries around the world.
